

Using Travel Nursing to Make Your Move

When you consider a permanent move, the details can be overwhelming and expensive. According to statistics about 50% of people are moving every 5 years. This makes for a lot of moving people. Our society is more mobile than ever. This includes nurses. It's much easier for a nurse to move. Nurses are needed everywhere. Which means you can take a travel assignment to just about anywhere in the country too.

When you take a travel assignment, the agencies take care of your travel expenses (up to a certain limit) and pay for a portion of your housing (with limits). This can be a tremendous help in transitioning your move. You tell the hospital what day you could start your assignment, giving yourself plenty of time to get there and get settled in.

If this is a move you were going to do anyway, why not do it as a traveler? You would get a portion of your travel paid for and your housing for the first 3 months. You would already have a job and income when you get there. After the three months, you could then extend your assignment or take a permanent position at the hospital. You could also ask around about other hospitals in the area as to which one is the best to work at in the area. It's hard to lose. During those three months, you can also be searching for an area or house that you would like to live in.

There are so many reasons to work as a traveling nurse and this is just one of them. If you are a nurse wanting to move yourself or your family to a new area, consider travel nursing as an option to get you there.

Bibliography:

http://www.theparentreport.com/resources/ages/early\_school/education/323.html